O2 PATHFINDERS

MAKING THE CONNECTIONS YOU NEED TO PLAY ON

Pathfinders are volunteers at schools, colleges, universities and clubs throughout the country whose role is to assist players in finding a place to play the game as they move through their rugby journeys, for example when a player moves from club to university to work, or from one part of the country to another, reducing the number of players that are currently lost to the game when such moves occur.

Having a network of Pathfinders will ensure that players enjoy a smoother transition from club to club and it will also ensure that clubs are able to easily recruit these players.

Wherever life takes you, there's one thing that goes with you everywhere - Your rugby. Play On makes it easier to carry on playing rugby when you move on. It's an RFU scheme that helps you make the right connections at a new club in a new place. So you can get on with making new mates in a new team.

Play On takes the hassle out of walking in to a new club by doing all the hard work for you. A network of local people across the country called O2 Pathfinders will make sure that if you're moving somewhere else, someone from a team in that area knows about it, will contact you and introduce you to their club, college or uni team. It's all you need to play on.
